loving our neighbors

The story of The Good Samaritan helps us understand what it means to love our neighbor. Loving his neighbor meant the Samaritan cared for the health needs of a stranger. Despite many barriers, the Samaritan chose to see the injured and abandoned man as his neighbor.

Jesus, the Great Physician, loved his neighbors through many miracles of healing. He brought healing and comfort to the sick, the broken and the dying, and reached out to the outcasts of society.

From our founding in 1996, Jesus' teaching and example has motivated the volunteers, staff, board and supporters of Exalta Health.

Exalta Health

Our community. Our health.

Our Community. Our Health.

Scripture also teaches the importance of community. We are interconnected in our families, churches and neighborhoods. Many factors affect the health of our community. One of these is the physical health of each of its members. A community is only as healthy as its least healthy members.

Exalta Health is committed to serving people and families of any ethnicity, language, gender, disability, religion or creed. It is by loving each member that we serve our community.

supporting our community

OUR MODEL OF CARE

Staff & Volunteers

We surround a small core of caring and competent staff (part and full time) with many enthusiastic, mission driven volunteers. We average 130 active volunteers each month ranging from doctors and dentists to our maintenance staff. Volunteers are at many different points in their careers ranging from college students to full time employees to retirees. This diversity creates a dynamic environment.

Patient Responsibility

Our patients are expected to take responsibility for their care by making payments they can afford at the time services are provided.

Community Resources

To work effectively within the healthcare system, Exalta Health participates in several Medicaid programs and health insurance plans. We also help patients to access assistance for prescribed medications.

Integrated Care

Our integrated healthcare services—including physical, vision, dental, behavioral and spiritual care—are provided to our community, promoting wellness for all.
